Exclusive product integration makes adding and purchasing images for Wix websites simple and seamless

Tel Aviv, Israel and New York, NY - November 18, 2014 - Wix (Nasdaq: WIX), a leading web-development platform, is teaming up with Bigstock, an easy-to-use marketplace with more than 21 million photos, videos, vectors and illustrations, to provide its customers with seamless access to high-quality, licensable images from within their Wix.com accounts.

Quality images have always been a fundamental component of good web design and contribute greatly to business success. In the last two years, the use of images by Wix's customers has increased by more than 150 percent. Businesses in all industries recognize consumers are becoming more visual and more focused on the quality of all content, particularly images.

The collaboration between Wix.com and Bigstock provides an ideal user experience for Wix's 56 million users to search and discover images by keyword or category, and to modify those images by adding filters or editing without ever leaving the Wix platform. This partnership also provides Bigstock's contributors a large and rapidly growing distribution channel for their images, evidenced by the 59 percent year-over-year increase in Wix's premium subscribers in the most recent quarter.

"Our users need affordable, accessible and high-quality images to enrich their websites, and this partnership answers that need," says Nir Zohar, President and COO of Wix. "The collaboration with Bigstock brings millions of professional grade images right to their fingertips, giving users yet another tool to create an online presence that looks exactly the way they want."
